CREATIVE PROJECT NEW

Creative Project NEW was established in February 2025 to support artists in their path toward artistic growth, visibility, and professional development. As a curator, I have extensive experience in the European art field. My professional background includes work as a creative and art director, filmmaker, writer, fashion designer, street artist, and painter. Today, my primary artistic focus is art photography.

Creative Project NEW is my second curatorial initiative. It is an expanded and updated version of my first project, Creative Project, which was successfully completed in the summer of 2025. The first edition created a strong space for collaboration, artistic development, and long-term creative growth.

Project Structure
Creative Project NEW is a six-month curatorial collaboration bringing together a small group of artists under the guidance of one curator.

Duration: 6 months
Participants: 5 artists
Curator: 1 curator

During the program, artists work on:
their individual artistic projects and one collective group project.

At the end of the six months, all outcomes are presented in a final public event and group exhibition, showcasing both individual and collaborative works.

Curatorial Approach

Creative Project NEW is a structured, focused, and intentional artistic process. Artists develop their projects under continuous curatorial guidance, combining conceptual development with practical execution.

At the same time, the project functions as a strong support system:

- artists grow together,
- exchange experience and knowledge,
- challenge and inspire each other.

Through this process, participants expand their artistic field, deepen their practice, and reach new creative horizons.

Program Structure

Duration: 6 months

Participants: 5 artists

Curator: 1 curator

Program format: 6 organizational meetings, 4 hours each (online or offline), mandatory attendance

Additional workshops and consultations: available upon request

Access to a private group chat for communication, shared materials, and collective reflection

During the program, artists work on their individual artistic projects and one collective group project.

At the end of the six months, all outcomes are presented in a final public event and group exhibition.

1. Group Meetings

The six organizational group meetings form the core of the program.

Each meeting lasts four hours and focuses on concept development, project discussion, group critique, and planning.

Participants present their projects, discuss progress, receive feedback, and define the collective direction.

These meetings help the group move forward synchronously and maintain a shared focus throughout the process.

2. Individual Goal Development

Each participant formulates a personal artistic goal.

The curator supports the participant in defining this goal and breaking it down into clear, achievable steps.

Examples of individual goals include:

- an exhibition
- a photographic or artistic series
- a book or publication
- a video project
- a portfolio
- exploration of new artistic forms or media

3. Collective Goal

Alongside individual work, the group develops one collective project, such as:

- a group exhibition
- a publication
- an online presentation

The format is chosen collectively and reflects the shared artistic direction of the group.

4. Workshops and Practical Sessions

Workshops and practical sessions are organized according to the needs of the group and may include:

- photography workshops
- art discussion and analysis
- plein air sessions
- shooting and production days
- work with text, editing, and sequencing

Sessions may be led internally or with invited external experts.

5. Learning and Reflection

Reflection is an essential part of the program.

It helps participants recognize progress, identify strengths, and prepare for the final presentation.

This process supports awareness of personal growth and strengthens artistic confidence.

6. Final Presentation

At the end of the six months, the results of the program are presented in a final public event and group exhibition.

The presentation brings together both individual projects and the collective group project, highlighting the outcomes of the entire process.

7. Outcomes and Opportunities

Participants:

- realize individual and collective projects
- build a coherent portfolio
- gain experience in collaboration and public presentation
- strengthen professional skills and artistic confidence
